

What Employees Want: A Little Thanks Goes a Long Way

63% feel unappreciated by their employer on a daily basis

Almost half 46% of respondents have left a job because they felt unappreciated

65% of respondents are likely to stay at a job with an unappreciative manager if their coworkers and peers still recognize their work

35% of respondents
want to be recognized by their co-workers just as much as their CEO

Of the 54% of respondents who manage others at work, 63% said their favorite form of praise was making it visible to other team members and the company

When asked what larger ways employers should show appreciation

34%
would like salary increases

30% would appreciate wellness and professional development stipends

35% The majority said they'd like recognition from their employers in the form of perks, bonuses or a recognition program

